

ALLOTMENT DAYS

A ragged row of cabbages stalks of red-crested runner beans and chives in purple clumps bring back the memory of allotted roles:
the father harvesting late summer crop the daughter ripe for magic.
still keeping childish watch for flower fairies,
amongst the brittle branches of an elder tree.

Susan Gaukroger