

Impact- the pick-me-up paper from Borderland Voices

IMPACT number one went down so well with Leek's café society that we're doing IMPACT number two.

In this issue our writers have some wise words on the way moods can swing between hope one minute and despair the next. So if Spring means Swing for you – up one minute and down the next – there are a couple of features to make you feel you are not alone.

Swinging the other way, is Hollywood still relevant? Whatever the good, bad or downright ugly movies it makes, the gossip columns would be lost without it. The glamour! The intrigues! The hair-dos, the heels...

Finally in this issue

Anglo-Saxon

Poetry

Does it still cut the mustard?

Take a look inside...

ABOUT US

Borderland Voices offers a range of workshops for people whose talents are often hidden beneath the weight of low spirits. It's all done on a shoestring but it gets results.

Art and writing sessions take place on Tuesdays up at Queens Drive, Haregate. It's free and there is always a warm welcome and a lot of support for everyone. We aim to produce work of a high quality. Some of this is in here for you to enjoy.

Contact us for details of latest projects, which include walks and environmental art and craft.
